

Indiana's $69 billion health industry, defined as biopharmaceuticals, medical devices and instruments, healthcare delivery, laboratories and payors – accounts for over 20 percent of Indiana's total state taxes and almost 10 percent of the state's employment. Across Indiana, researchers are working on the cutting edge of life science discovery and translating those advancements into new business opportunities and the latest in therapeutic treatments. Universities, private industry, and government unite collaboratively here to further develop Indiana's life science base and network of supporting businesses. Recognized repeatedly as a premier cluster for pharmaceuticals, medical devices and ag biotechnology, the impact of Indiana's research and development strength reaches around the world.
